CITY OF SOUTHFIELD'S PUBLIC ART

The Southfield Public Arts Commission was established pursuant to Ordinance No. 1630 on September 22, 2014. Its purpose is to advocate for, promote, and participate in the selection, placement, and installation of public art throughout the City, serving the public interest, enhancing community welfare, and enriching quality of life through the arts.

Building on this foundation, the City adopted Ordinance No. 1657 on April 3, 2016, establishing a public art requirement for development projects exceeding $1 million. Over the past decade, this policy has contributed to a significant increase in public art across Southfield, strengthening placemaking efforts and fostering a sense of identity and pride for both businesses and residents.

In 2025, the public art requirement was increased, raising the maximum amount required based on the cost of a project's development. Beyond private development requirements, the City—led by Mayor Dr. Kenson J. Siver—has actively championed the creation and installation of numerous public art pieces, further embedding arts and culture into the fabric of the community.
